Honest to God

Frederick the Great, King of Prussia, once visited the main jail in Berlin to talk to the prisoners and see what conditions they were living in. As he was escorted from cell to cell, the inmates fell to their knees before him, asking for mercy and protesting their innocence of all the charges brought against them. All, that is, except one prisoner who bowed to him in silence. Frederick's curiosity was aroused. 'Have you nothing to say for yourself?' he asked, 'Why are you in here?' 'Armed robbery, your majesty' the man replied. 'I suppose you're innocent?' Frederick said. 'No, your majesty. I'm guilty as hell. My punishment is richly deserved.' Frederick turned to the warden and said, 'Release this scoundrel at once. I can't have him in here corrupting all these innocent men!'

If you think you are not conceited, it means you are very conceited indeed. (C.S.Lewis)
